It would have been difficult for Reinald Werrenrath, the distinguished baritone who appears here in Mead Memorial Chapel on Friday, Jan. 12, to have escaped being a singer, and a good singer. BLUE QUINTET OUT FOR BLOOD TONIGHT

Varsity Still in The Running in Spite of Recent Record of Adverse Scores

At first thought it might seem that Coach Carl Smith's basketball team would go on to the home floor tonight with little chance of taking the game from the fast Vermont quintet, or of even tying the contest, considering the string of defeats that has fallen to their lot thus far. But the keener observer will wisely take into account the following facts before placing his bets on the game tonight.

First, the Varsity worked under tremendous difficulties on their western trip, having had to play a game every night after travelling a long distance by day. As a result, the men were in no fit condition to play marbles after a few days of this treatment.

Second, in spite of this handicap, the team, in six out of the eleven games played, lead their opponents during the first period. Among these were the Geneva College, Carnegie Tech, Trinity, and Harvard games, four of the hardest played on the whole circuit.

Third, the scores at the end of three of the games were noticeably close, the tired Varsity holding their ground thru the last half of each in the face of their fresher opponents.

Fourth, the floor squad from Knox College, Ill., which Dartmouth had no trouble in cleaning up the previous night, snatched victory from Coach Keady's admittedly strong outfit on

Comm. Dempsey Defines Aims Of Education

Says Democracy is Useless Unless Controlled by Intelligent and Cultured People

Mr. C. H. Dempsey, Vermont State Commissioner of Education, addressed the student body assembled in chapel Saturday morning on the aims and purposes of education. These he defined by making three main points: education should increase a man's power, should develop his intelligence to cope with problems, and should elevate his desires to a higher plane.

The text of Mr. Dempsey's talk follows.

"The conception of education that sees in it a means of increasing one's personal pleasure in life; or adding to his ability to utilize his surroundings for his personal advantage; or giving him entry to the society of cultured people, is a narrow and unsatisfactory conception of its purpose.

"Education has a larger and more comprehensive purpose. It is to be thought of as a process by which our powers for the realization of our desires and the performance of necessary tasks, are increased; as a process by which we develop the intelligence we bring to problems and their solution; and finally as a process by which desires and activities are elevated to a higher plane.

"Education which is characteristically individualistic or which is aimed to secure the greatest possible advantage to the person himself, is imperfect. It must have a higher purpose directed toward the utilization of individual powers for the common good. 'It is a delusion to conceive that a democracy can confer any blessings unless it is controlled by an intelligent and cultured people.

"Upon the students of Middlebury College and similar institutions rest the privilege and responsibility of assuming the leadership in social and civic affairs in order that our country may realize its great purposes."

FORMER PREXY TO PREACH NEXT SUNDAY

Pres. John M. Thomas of Penn State College, formerly president of Middlebury, will preach from the pulpit of Mead Memorial Chapel at the vesper service next Sunday afternoon.

The Home Economics House was formally opened at a tea given there in honor of the ladies of the faculty, last Saturday afternoon from four to six.

'VARSITY FINISHES HARD WESTERN TRIP WITHOUT A VICTORY

Stress of Journey Causes Defeat—No Fault of Men

SIKORKSI STARS

Games All Close—Harvard Held for First Half

Coach Smith's wards returned to Middlebury Saturday night, having completed their invasion of the West, playing eleven hard games in as many consecutive nights without a win. Every game was close, however, and the result in doubt up to the last minute of play. The long trip proved too strenuous and the men arrived home Saturday in an exhausted condition. They were much handicapped by sickness and injuries, Knowles having pulled a tendon in his ankle in the Geneva game and Lambe, in the same game, having received an injury to his nose. Coach Smith himself was taken sick Thursday at Hartford, Conn., and left Saturday for his home in Lewiston, Me.

Nine men were taken on the trip: Capt. Leonard, Sikorski, Hardy, Holquist, Lambe, Knowles, Axtel and the two Rices. Of these the most successful five-man combination proved to be Axtel and Lambe, forwards; Sikorski, center; and Leonard and Holquist, guards. All the men showed up exceptioually well on the trip, Capt. Leonard, Sikorski and Holquist starring. Sikorski, who is playing his first season on the Varsity, played an excellent game at center, and his guarding was spectacular. Capt. Leonard was high point man in almost every game played.

The trip from a publicity standpoint, Manager Draper believes to have been a success. Many western newspapers praised Middlebury's style of playing, her scrappiness, and sportsmanship, realizing the difficulties of playing eleven games in succession, all on unfamiliar floors.

The first game was against the strong University of Rochester combination, which rolled up a score of 39 points against the locals' 25. In the second game, with Western Reserve at Cleveland, Coss, star center for the Reserve, scored 22 points alone in the first half. In the second half, however, the Blue five rallied and completely outplayed their opponents, allowing Coss only 7 points but failing to surmount the Clevelanders' lead. At St. Ignatius the following night, Middlebury played a fine game the first half—as indeed she did in practically every game—and tied the score 8-8. The trip began to tell on the boys' endurance, however, and their weakening in the second period gave the game to the Saints.

Due to a storm, the team had bad connections and had to travel all day before arriving at Detroit for the game with the University. Leonard's foul shooting in this game was spectacular, as he shot 12 out of 15 attempts. At Mt. Union the next night, Middlebury played circles around their opponents, the score being 15 to 8 in favor of Middlebury at the end of the first half. But again a second-half relapse caused the loss of the game.

Geneva College the following night furnished the best game of the trip, the final whistle blowing with the score ties 31-31. In the overtime period, Geneva scored 2 points. The Blue, however, held the lead thru most of

Western Electric Man Gives Vocational Talk

Believes Business Making Great Progress—Urges Hearers To Form Habit Of Studying

Mr. J. W. Dietz, educational director and personnel expert of the Western Electric Co., gave an interesting talk on "The Manufacture and Sale of Electrical Appliances" in the lecture room of Chemistry Building, Dec. 15. Mr. Dietz' lecture was the second of Dean Wiley's program of vocational lectures and was well attended in spite of the nearness of the Christmas holidays. Mr. Dietz began by giving a short description of the work of the Western Electric Co.

"The Western Electric," he said, "acts as a supply company for the Bell Telephone Co., a concern which does 200 millions of dollars' worth of business a year, and for the Western Union Telegraph Co. Even during times of depression, the telephone business has grown steadily. Another department of the Western Electric attends to the distribution of accessories. Small units of the company take care of this branch of the business in the various cities

"There are six kinds of service which a man may consider taking up in this business. First, there are the skilled laborers in shop and warehouse, then the clerical workers in the office, technical experts such as engineers and physicists, those who buy and sell materials and attend to the conservation of waste, publicity men, men who look after financial matters and the rendering of credit, and lastly, executive and administrative officers. It was determined by a recent investigation that of 132 college men with the Western Electric Co. from 64 colleges, 63 per cent had taken courses in science and engineering, and 35 per cent general or art courses. This goes to show that there are many men in the work who have not been technically trained.

"College students can well afford to be critical of vocations offered them and in each case should consider the service to be rendered to society. It is always difficult for a man to judge what work he is best suited for. It has been my experience that a man's college record has a great bearing on his later career. Tendencies and traits developed in college show up in business later on. Business men recognize this fact and are particular to have a man's college record before them before hiring him. Few of you realize this but it is a fact that college life is a "slice of the real thing." As a rule the upper third of the class has a better chance to land a good job. And so my advice to you is to have a plan to follow out in college pointing toward a definite end."

4000 Acres Former Battell Property Reverts To Middlebury as Provided in Will

RESULT OF ACTION BEGUN BY THOMAS

Resolution Declining Gift of Tract Has Passed Senate and Sure to be Favored by House.

Nearly 4000 acres of the choicest timber land in Vermont, according to recent Washington dispatches, is about to be added to Middlebury's already immense forest holdings by an act of Congress.

The tract, which lies in the towns of Lincoln and Warren, and embraces the summit of Mount Lincoln, was once the property of the late Joseph Battell, who willed it to the United States government on condition that it be made into a national park. The Battell will also provides that, in case the gift was not accepted by the United States, it should go to Middlebury College as the

GREEN MT. CLUB TO REBUILD LODGE

Trailers Meet To Elect Officers Tonight—To Start Membership Drive Soon

The Lake Pleiad Section of the Green Mountain Club will hold a meeting tonight in the parlors of the Addison House. The main business of the meeting will be the election of officers for the ensuing year, after which Professor P. C. Voter will give a review of the work done on the Long Trail last year. A little later, it is planned to have a meeting at which a Long Trail supper in Long Trail style will be served. This event has been deferred to allow the new members to be present.

In order to secure the funds and men necessary for the rebuilding of Lake Pleiad Lodge, which was destroyed by fire a few weeks ago, the Lake Pleiad Section plans to conduct an energetic campaign for members, especially among the students of the college. The burning of the lodge at Lake Pleiad causes a bad gap in the line of Long Trail shelters. It was, moreover, a favorite rendezvous for week-end hikers, being situated so close to the main road and to beautiful Lake Pleiad. Probably more hikers have entered their names in the register of Lake Pleiad Lodge than in that of almost any other lodge along the Trail. It is therefore very essential that the old lodge be replaced as early as possible.

The college has long felt the desirability of making its students better acquainted with the Battell Forest tract, and two years ago the Bread Loaf outing was instituted largely with this purpose in view. Inasmuch as the outing had to be given up this year, the Long Trail enthusiasts are anxious to arrange more week-end hikes to Lake Pleiad and to other scenic points along the top of the range over which the magnificent timber of the Battell Forest grows. Lake Pleiad Lodge would be the natural base of supplies

FOR LOVE OF THE TRAIL

The call of the great out-of-doors comes to every normal person at times, especially in youth. As a student becomes engrossed in his books and his games of a more or less artificial character, he often fails to heed the call even though he is located in a little Vermont town placed between ranges of snow-topped mountains. For some, however, the mountains and the forests hold a great delight and fascination. Others are kept from this enjoyment because they have never experienced what it is to climb to the top of a high mountain, or to tramp along the backbone of the range where the icy wind through the stunted balsams cuts like a knife.

In order that all might enjoy this form of recreation, the Green Mountain Club was formed in 1910 and the Long Trail was built, traversing four-fifths the length of the state, along the very crest of the Green Mountains. At intervals of an easy day's hike along the Trail were built lodges, or shelters, where hikers can put up for the night. One of the chief of these was Lake Pleiad Lodge, built by the Lake Pleiad Section of the Club and located about 9 miles south of Bread Loaf Mountain, and but a few rods from a road which crosses the range. Being thus admirably situated, the Lodge was used to a great extent by automobile parties as well as by hikers up to the time it was burned a few weeks ago.

To rebuild the Lodge, the Lake Pleiad Section, which is composed largely of men who are in some way affiliated with the college, must have funds with which to buy materials, and members who are willing to help in the actual work of construction.

The Club also plans to build a section of new trail over Bread Loaf Mountain this coming spring. A week-end expedition in early spring for the purpose of building a lodge or of building a trail over Bread Loaf would seem to be an attractive outing to anyone who loves the out-of-doors.

The great Battell Forest, the most valuable of the many legacies which fell to the College from the will of Mr. Joseph Battell, contains treasures of virgin timber which few Middlebury students know anything about. The expected acquisition of another big tract on and about Lincoln Mountain from the United States government will make Middlebury College the owner of the largest tract of timber in Vermont. This forest was left to the college by Mr. Battell with the understanding that it should be preserved by methods of scientific forestry and should be made into a great park for the use of the public. In view of these facts, it is indeed deplorable that the students of the college, as a whole, are totally unfamiliar with this big, virgin forest property which lies so near.

From Mount Horrid to the south, one may travel northward along the Long Trail for four days without leaving the college property. On either side of the range, the hiker may look down over acres of mighty pines and spruces, all of which are part of the Battell Forest. Thus, the Long Trail work brings one into closer acquaintanceship with the Forest, which is really a part of our great little college.

WELL DONE, MR. WILLIAMS

When any one of the many student organizations does a difficult thing, and does it supremely well, as we are forced to concede the Dramatic Club did the evening of December 19 in the staging of "The Story of a Star," as adapted by Professor Cady, we feel that the work of that organization deserves more than passing notice. Considering that the Dramatic Club is less than a year old, and that this production was prepared and presented at a time when the mind of everyone was on vacation and home, the actors, their director, and the stage manager in particular are worthy of our heartiest congratulations.

The quaint old setting, the sweet caroling of the angelic choir, and over all the soft, mystic radiance of the improvised stars combined to produce an effect which left the audience spell-bound in their seats. Nothing could have been more fitting or more beautiful as a Christmas observance than this exquisite little dramatization.

BLUFFING

One of the most sought after accomplishments in the college world, and one of the proudest boasts of those who have acquired it, is the ability to bluff. This useful science is supposedly an invaluable aid to success. The possessor of a good "line" or the person who can "rave on" is in a most enviable position for he has to work only half as hard as the person who must depend upon real knowledge to make a good showing.

This is an unfortunate distortion of values, for bluffing is a great obstacle not only to clear thinking and honest intellectual habits but also to the development of character. Any attempt at bluffing is usually a confused mass of inexact facts, haphazard guesses and well sounding but meaningless sentences in which the quantity of words and the elaboration of style are expected to bridge over the gaps in knowledge. Since real thinking is based on exact knowledge, when that is taken away there remains only the blurred fog of words which say nothing. Bluffing then inevitably cultivates inaccuracy and superficiality of thought.

It has also a certain effect on the character. Since its primary intention is to deceive it is morally unsound and the amused scorn with which it is secretly regarded, even by those who use it, is indicative of its true character.

Bluffing is sometimes justified on the grounds that it requires and thus encourages ingenuity and imagination. It is true that it often calls into play these faculties but there are manifold opportunities for using them which are not attended by the same dangers to mind and character.

One of the most significant aspects of the situation is the fact that bluffing usually fails in its purpose. The bluffer very rarely deceives either his fellow students or his professors. It is only himself that he fools into a false security and the delusion that he has made a brilliant success.

If bluffing is indeed detrimental to the best interests of the students, might there not well be included in any list of New Year's resolutions a resolve to substitute for bluffing clear thinking supported by real knowledge.

NEW PED. TEACHER ADDED TO FACULTY

Alumnus Returning To Enter Dept. of Education

Charles A. Adams '95 and Miss Ellen E. Wiley To Join Teaching Force

The addition of Professor Charles Albertus Adams to the Department of Pedagogy was announced this morning by Duane L. Robinson, secretary of the faculty. Professor Adams, who is a graduate of Middlebury in the class of 1895, will take up his new duties as Professor of Education here Feb. 5. He is at present a member of the faculty of the Rhode Island State College of Education at Providence.

Professor Adams is well-known in Middlebury, being the son-in-law of President-emeritus Ezra Brainerd. After graduating at Middlebury, he spent a year in graduate study in history, economics, and politics at Johns Hopkins University. He taught five years in St. Albans Academy at Knoxville, Illinois, and then went to Wyoming State University, where he occupied the position of Professor of English and Principal of the Preparatory Department for a year. From here he transferred to Adams, Mass., where he was principal of the High School from 1902 to 1907. Following a year as Dean and Principal of the Maryland College for Women, he became superintendent of Schools in West Rutland and Castleton, Vt., and in 1912, Principal of the State Normal School at Castleton.

Professor Adams is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternities.

Coming as he does with such a long and progressive record of experience in his profession, it is felt that Professor Adams will be a most valuable addition to the faculty.

Another recent appointment to the faculty announced by Secretary Robinson at this time is that of Miss Ellen E. Wiley, who will occupy the position of Instructor of Mathematics of the Women's College. Miss Wiley, who is a sister of Dean Edgar J. Wiley, will assume her new position next September.

A graduate of St. Lawrence University in the class of 1907. Miss Wiley has specialized since her graduation in the teaching of mathematics, having held positions at Riverhead, N. Y., Ticonderoga, N. Y., and at Ansonia, Conn. At the first named schools she had several years of experience as assistant principal.

Pres. Moody Brings Christmas Message Dec. 17

Fraser Metzger of Randolph tells Audience Love Must Rule in All Relations

"The secret of the beautiful character of Enoch," said President Moody when he took his text from Genesis 5, 21-22 in delivering the Christmas sermon at vespers, Dec. 17, "was because he was influenced and inspired by the sight of a child. And they said of him 'that he walked with God' because of this influence that the child made upon him.

"In the same way are many men led back to the faith of their fathers by a little child. A man often becomes discouraged and loses interest in life due to disillusioning events and disappointments. And when the influence of a child comes into his life, he often regains something of his childhood and his interest in life is renewed.

"Jesus repeatedly taught concerning the importance of every child as when He said 'except ye become as a little child ye can in no way enter the kingdom of Heaven.' There is a great unrest in life today," concluded President Moody, "and we need to get back to the Christmas message and become as a little child that the Kingdom of God may come into our hearts."

"And the greatest of these is love," was the text of the sermon preached by the Rev. Fraser Metzger of Randolph, Vt., at the vesper service, last Sunday. He prophesied that in the coming great changes which are already sweeping over America, religion will play the greatest part. And in that change religion itself would undergo changes. Of late we have been discarding things which are no longer useful, and so in religion too we have laid aside the doctrinary and are adopting the positive religion.

Mr. Metzger defined a positive religion as meaning first, the fact of God; that is, a personal God who should lead us out of danger and comfort us in our griefs. Secondly, it means the fact of Jesus, a living Christ who is guiding men to love, service and sacrifice.

"Many years ago the youth of the land were being urged by preachers and teachers to "succeed." But that cry no longer holds good, for the youth are being inspired to take their places in the ranks as good citizens imbued with the spirit of love.

People everywhere are coming to understand more and more that love and love alone has the power to solve their problems.

In the war was this spirit of love most evident when the flower of the nation willingly laid down their lives for their country, for love of country. Mr. Metzger quoted from Seeger, a young war poet, that famous poem, "I have a rendez-vous with death," which expresses the love and idealism of those patriots. As it has been in the past so may it be in the future that the principles of good will and love shall bind us together for a common good.

Due to the vacation interval little interest has so far been evinced in the song contest for the Women's College, The song contest committee has therefore voted to extend the final date until January 14. The rules of the contest are unchanged, as is the winner's prize, which is to consist of a half-fare to Camp Maqua.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT

An announcement of the engagement of Miss Alice Littlefield '23, of East Walpole, Mass., to Mr. Arthur Dexter Grose of Boston, Mass., was made at a luncheon given at the home of Miss Littlefield, Dec. 30. Miss Littlefield belongs to Delta Delta Delta sorority. Mr. Grose is a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity of Tufts College.

LIBERAL ADDITION OF NEW COURSES

Six Depts. Offer Wider Choice of Studies

Extension of Curriculum Announced By Prof. Howard This Morning

Eight new courses, five of B grade and three of C grade, are to be offered the coming semester, Prof. F. E. Howard, chairman of the curriculum committee, announced this morning.

In the department of Economics, Prof. Macdonald will give an advanced course in accounting which will deal with financial interpretations, corporation accounts, etc. It will not be a practical course in book-keeping, however, but will be of a more technical nature, aiming to give the type of training that a man would need in order to serve on a board of directors, or in a responsible administrative position.

Prof. Frank L. Cady, in the English department, offers a course in "English Poetry of the Eighteenth Century." Prof. Cady has made no definite statement regarding this course, but it will probably be of B grade and will be well worth taking by all lovers of the English romanticists.

In the French department, Prof. H. P. W. deVisme will give a new course in "Advanced Grammar," which will be open to all qualified seniors.

Prof. John G. Howes, in his branch, will give a course under the title of "Social History of the Western World." This will be History 2, and will be a substitute for the course, "The French Revolution and Napoleon," as announced in the new catalogue.

Two new courses, "Social Psychology" and "School Administration" will be given in the department of Pedagogy. "Social Psychology" by Prof. Howard, will be given as Pedagogy 4. "School Administration," to be given jointly by Professors Howard and Kingsley, is a course primarily for men who plan to be school principals or superintendents, or to enter administrative work in education.

In Political Science, Prof. Charles F. Abbott is to offer two new courses. The first is "American Political Theories," a B course meant especially for those who are specializing in American history or who intend to enter the law. The prerequisites for this will be any two courses in United States history or in Political Science. The second, "American Diplomacy," is a C course dealing not only with the diplomatic relations of the United States, but with general principles and rules governing modern diplomacy.

A limited number of 1922-23 catalogues giving a more detailed description of these courses have been received from the printer, but are not for distribution. The balance of the new catalogues are daily expected to arrive.

THE SCHOOL OF ENGLISH
Conducted by
MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE
June 30—August 14, 1923

The Bread Loaf School is housed in a quaint old Inn on the edge of the Battell Forest. It consists of groups of students working on the studio plan in creative writing, stage design, dramatic production, literary appreciation and problems of teaching. The presence of distinguished guests and close association between instructors and students afford ideal conditions for study and creative work.

EDWARD D. COLLINS, Director
FIFTEENTH SUMMER SESSION
MIDDLEBURY - VERMONT

EXAMINATION PERIODS SHORTENED TO 2 HOURS

The mid-year examinations will begin Saturday, Jan. 27, in McCullough Gymnasium, and will occupy all the following week, ending Feb. 3. Instead of the usual three-hour examination, each period will be but two hours in length, so that the time taken up with examinations will be appreciably shortened. The first period will be from 8:00 to 10:00 a. m., the second from 10:30 to 12:30, and the third from 2:00 to 4:00 p. m. All college exercises will be suspended during examination week.

One-year Rule To Be Debated

At the meeting of the Wetherell Club tomorrow night at 7:00 p. m., the question of the advisability of the one-year rule in athletics will be stated and discussed in open forum. All who have ideas to express on this subject or who would like to hear it debated are asked to attend.

The Club, at its last meeting, voted to debate Penn State provided such a contest could be satisfactorily arranged.

FOOTBALL MEN HONORED BY UNDERGRADUATE BODY

Handsome blue sweaters, each with a white knit "M" on the front, were awarded to the football letter men this morning after chapel by Prof. P. C. Voter, head of the Athletic Council. Prof. Voter addressed a few pleasing remarks to the football men and to the student body before presenting each man with his sweater. The sweaters were voted to the football men by the Undergraduate Association and were paid for with the money raised by Tag Day. Much credit is due the members of the sweater committee for their promptness in raising the money and in securing the sweaters.

The cross-country letter men were given their letters and shingles at the same time. Their names as accepted by the Athletic Council in its meeting yesterday are: Cook '24, Kendall '24, Shelvey '23, Palmer '25, Robinson '26, and Fish '26.

FOR THE PLAY

Coaching — Prof. Burrage and Prof. Cady
Stage Director — J. W. Williams

Those of us who snatched a brief hour from hysterical preparations for a Christmas vacation or from the cheerfully cynical to-do of Christmas shopping to see the Dramatic Club's performance of "The Story of a Star," found a refreshing presentation of the Christmas story. We forgot for a time the deluge of Christmas greetings, Christmas fiction, and Christmas sermons which seem to combine to make the Old, Old Story merely an old story and approached the holiday season with a more reverent sense of its meaning.

"The Story of a Star" presents the events surrounding the birth of Christ as they were dramatized five centuries ago in the miracle plays of York, Coventry, and Wakefield. Professor Cady has chosen from these medieval cycles typical scenes and bound them into a unified play of the Nativity from the Anunciation to the Adoration of the Magi. Though produced with the aid of modern stage devices, the play preserves the naturalness and humanity with which the Churchmen clothed the Bible story for their uncultured charges: the Shepherds who treat the Divine Babe as they would the child of a neighboring swain; the tyrant-buffoon Herod; the quiet dignity of the Kings; the simple beauty of Mary. "The Story of a Star" is a worthy revival of the old plays, and one which an audience could see again and again with pleasure as a fitting service in the Christmas season.

It may seem a small point to compliment actors upon mere rendering of lines. But when the antiquated idiom, artificial word order, and jerky verses with awkwardly recurring rhymes are considered, it is no small compliment to say that the Dramatic Club's cast delivered the lines smoothly and understandingly. Miss Taylor's interpretation of Mary contributed much to the reverent spirit of the play. The antics of Mr. Lawton, as Herod, drew from a twentieth century college audience the same guffaws which greeted his earliest predecessor in the role. The Mak episode suffered from indistinctness in action so that one of the most human touches of the play, foreshadowing the Shepherds' chumming with the infant Jesus, did not receive its full value. A general criticism might be made of the voices of the cast as a whole, which were at times so rough as to make us feel that the uncouth performers of five hundred years ago were playing their parts again upon our stage.

The audience's impression of the play, however, came not so much from the acting itself as from the operatic aids of music, setting, and lighting. The familiar words and tunes of the carols awoke a response in the listener

BARRE PAPER COMMENDS COLLEGE GLEE CLUB

In regard to the concert given by the Glee Club at Barre, Dec. 12, the Barre Daily Times says:

"A large audience greeted the Middlebury College Glee Club at Quarry Bank hall last evening, under the auspices of the Barre Woman's Club. The program was varied and pleasing. The quartets and choruses were well-rendered under the direction of Prof. Bonney. Mr. Dyer and Mr. Hunter received merited applause for the two solos of the evening. The feature of the program was the violin solos by Mr. Prata. The club sang at Spaulding High and Goddard Academy this morning."

Outing Club To Receive Funds To Build Ski Jump

Trying to Arrange Hockey Schedule—May Play R. P. I. and Williams—Shelvey Makes Trip to Placid

Thru the untiring efforts of a few enthusiastic members, the Outing Club has secured the promise of $300 with which to construct a ski jump. $100 of this is offered by the college, $100 by the Athletic Association, Edwin L. Bigelow, manager—this last on condition of a reasonable total cost of construction—and $100 by the Middlebury Board of Trade. The amounts offered by the college and Athletic Association do not cut into the previous $300 appropriation to the Outing Club. Inquiries are now being made as to the cost of the proposed jump.

The Club finds a considerable interest in hockey this year and has succeeded in setting up a rink on the old tennis courts. An offer of a game has been received from R. P. I. and negotiations are also in progress to schedule a game with Williams. In view of the recently increased winter sports, it is likely that it will not prove difficult in securing other contests, providing enough men try out for the team to warrant it. Practice will commence on the rink as soon as the weather will allow.

Cyril Shelvey '23, unofficially represented Middlebury at a winter sports carnival at Lake Placid, N. Y., during vacation. Although the crack skaters, and snow shoe and ski champions of Dartmouth, McGill and Wisconsin, took part in the contest, Shelvey came near to running away with the snow shoe cross-country race and would have done so if it were not for a defective bit of rawhide which bound on his shoe. He was the fourth to finish in the ski cross-country event.

Shelvey reported some marvelous exhibitions of ski jumping at this carnival, especially by the men from the University of Wisconsin.

Y. W. C. A. BAZAAR COMPLETE SUCCESS

Dances and Comedy Acts Feature Entertainment

Proceeds Amounting to $300 To Be Used for Maqua Delegates

The Y. W. C. A. bazaar held in the Gymnasium, Saturday evening, Dec. 16, proved to be a complete success. The sum cleared at the affair is estimated at $300. This will be used in sending delegates to Maqua next summer.

The Gymnasium was decorated in keeping with the season, with greens, streamers in the Christmas colors, and a huge Christmas tree. Santa Claus was present, accompanied by the Christmas fairy.

The entertainment included a solo dance by Verna Scott '25, a recitation by Whitney '26, an act by the "Clever College Comedians," and finally a four-leaf-clover dance presented by Miss Scott '25 and Mr. Leary '25, assisted by a chorus. One of the chief attractions of the evening was a side show, "Dreamland and Screamland." The arts and crafts, the candy, the food and the ice-cream booths were well patronized and sold all their wares before the evening was over.

The bazaar was in charge of Frances Caswell '23, who was assisted by several committees.

COLLEGE RECEIVES VALUABLE TRACT FOREST ON MOUNTAIN

residuary legatee. A resolution declaring that the United States government declines to accept this grant of property has just passed the Senate and it is merely a matter of time before like action will be taken by the House.

The matter of the legacy was taken up with the secretary of agriculture in 1915 by former president John M. Thomas, executor of the Battell will. No action was taken on it, however, until June, 1920, when Doctor Thomas was advised that the actual creation of the national park rested with Congress alone. As the result of a conference between Doctor Thomas and Hon. Frank C. Partridge, a trustee of the college, Senator Dillingham introduced in the Senate on Dec. 14, 1920, a bill to provide for the establishment of the Battell National Park. The bill slumbered in committee for a long time, but finally Senator Smoot of Utah, chairman of the Senate committee on public lands, informed the Vermont senator that the committee would have to report the bill unfavorably.

At Senator Dillingham's request a few weeks ago, the committee reported out the above mentioned resolution declining the gift of the land. After passing the Senate, this resolution went to the House, where its interests are being looked out for by Congressman Frank L. Greene. It will undoubtedly be favorably acted upon here at the earliest possible moment.

The conditions imposed upon the government in case of acceptance of the land were, to quote the resolution: "That the Government should construct and maintain suitable roads and buildings upon the land for the use and accommodation of visitors, and should employ suitable caretakers to the end and purpose that the woodland should be preserved so far as possible in its primitive beauty." Evidently the lawmakers decided that it would be inexpedient to attempt such a project on so small a scale. It was further provided in the will that copies of Mr. Battell's books, many of which he had written as a keen observer and a faithful chronicler of nature, should be placed in suitable buildings within the proposed park where they might be of ready access to readers and students.

Mount Lincoln is one of the highest mountains in the state, being some 4160 feet in height. Its summit commands a splendid view in all directions of fertile valleys, farms, villages, and reaches of the Green Mountains. The famous "Long Trail of the Green Mountains" passes directly over Mount Lincoln and through the tract which the college will receive. This tract embraces between 3900 and 4000 acres and is located not far from a good road connecting the villages of Warren, on the east, and Bristol, on the west. It is but a small part of the land which Mr. Battell once owned thruout the state, the wealthy benefactor of Middlebury having been the owner at one time of some 30,000 acres.

singers, all four of his grandparents—in fact reading the genealogy of the Werrenraths and the Camps (the latter his mother's family) makes one think of the famous Bach family of Fisenach.

George Werrenrath, Reinald's father, was a distinguished operatic tenor, first in his native country, Denmark, then in this country, whither he came in 1876. For seven years he was tenor soloist in Henry Ward Beecher's Plymouth Church in Brooklyn, N. Y. There he married Aretta Raymond Camp, a concert singer well known in her time. George Werrenrath's father was Johann Peter Werrenrath, a famous Danish Basso, and his wife, Kirsten Christenson, was a noted singer of Norway. And for two generations back of those were two Engelbert Werrenraths, both of them famous musicians.

On the maternal side the musical ancestry of Reinald Werrenrath is no less distinguished and is purely American. His grandfather, Henry Camp, was a bass singer and for two years was choir director in the Old First Church of New York, and for fifteen years held a similar position in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn. His wife, Anna Armstrong, of New York, was a well known concert singer of her day. Then one goes back to Reinald's maternal great-grandfather, Nathan Camp, a bass singer and a player of the bass viol; his great great grandfather, Jonathan Camp, and his wife, Rachel Hickok, both of them singers, and finally it is possible to go back two more generations to Nicholas Camp, who founded Milford, Conn., in 1625, and undoubtedly would have sung in the choir of the Meeting House, except that those dour puritans of that day frowned on music as being one of the chief weapons of the devil.

If Reinald Werrenrath had become anything but a singer and a very good singer, it is certain that many graves would have been disturbed by the turning in them of his musical ancestors.

An informal dance was held Saturday evening at the Alpha Sigma Phi house. The rooms were prettily decorated with the fraternity colors, black and red. Music was furnished by Golnick '25 and Prata '25. The chaperones were Mrs. Lacalle, Professor and Mrs. J. S. Kingsley.

The children of the Middlebury graded schools presented a playette in the McCullough Gymnasium Saturday afternoon, December 19. The little play pictured the contrast between Christmas in several foreign countries and in America. The children were coached by the students of Miss Young's playground course.

VARSITY FINISHES WESTERN TRIP WITHOUT A VICTORY

the game. At Duquesne in Pittsburg, Middlebury was very much handicapped by the small floor and exceedingly low ceiling. Carnegie Tech of the same place proved to be the strongest team the locals had met on the whole trip. The game was played in Motor Square Gardens before a huge crowd. In spite of the fact that they were out of condition, Coach Smith's team kept a few points ahead of their opponents most of the game and lost by only four points. Capt. Leonard's foul shooting was again very superior in this contest.

From Pittsburg, the team took a long journey by sleeper to Hartford, Conn., where they met the Trinity five the night of Jan. 4. Here they were joined by two fresh men, Clowar and Towne. Trinity presented a strong line-up but Middlebury again followed their previous tactics of taking the lead during the first half, only to be nosed out by 2 points at the end. At Harvard, Friday night, thru an unavoidable accident, Capt. Leonard was unable to play. Nothing daunted, the team took the floor minus their captain and played a wonderful game for the first 13 minutes of play. At the end of 15 minutes, the score stood Middlebury 13, Harvard 9, but the strain was beginning to tell and the Blue was overwhelmed in the last half to the tune of 46-26. The Massachusetts Aggies offered an impregnable five-man defense the next night which the Varsity was unable to dent.

It will be noticed that in nearly every game, the Blue tossers outplayed their opponents as long as they remained fresh. This would indicate that the trip was disastrous, not because of any lack of basketball ability on the part of Coach Smith's men, but entirely because of the length and strain of the trip.

Coach Smith stated as his belief that after three days of complete rest, the team will come out on the home floor tonight and chalk up the first victory of the season in the contest with their old rivals from the Queen City.

and interpreted the spirit of the play at once more reverently and more joyously than any mere words could do. They were especially effective in combination with tableaux, as in the adoration of the Shepherds.

But pleasing as these elements of the production were, they were subordinate to the sheer beauty and appropriate art of the stage setting and lighting. In spite of handicaps in material and in the circumstances of production, Mr. Williams produced effects that were satisfying in the highest degree. The skillful playing of lights upon a simple but suggestive setting turned the stage from a scene for midnight pranks of shepherds to a fitting place for the reverent worship of kings. And throughout the latter part of the play, the Star whose tale was unfolding on the stage watched, a symbol in nature of the true significance of the Christmas story.
